They were just 19 years when they wrote the song in 1952 for Big Mama Thornton, whose increased version of the song song February 1953. His version was a resounding success, and made the song famous. Many artists recorded the song in later years, but in 1956 Elvis tried it out “he had been familiar with the Thornton version”, but he never considered trying it out until he heard the Freddie Bell and the Bellboys version, according to Lieber and Stoller. Interestingly, the songwriters didn’t like Elvis’s version so much, Mike Stoller would later say that she was singing to a man. And he would sing to a dog”.Elvis and his band during rehearsals for their appearance on the Milton Berle Show in 1956. Photo courtesy of Michael Ochs Archives/Getty Images However, Elvis’s version would be the one that would become a touchstone in the history of American music. And even if the Elvis version doesn’t contain the same sharpness as the Thornton version, it captures Elvis at his daring and rockably best. The first thing you hear in the song is her voice, as if she was already moving at 100 miles an hour. It never lets go. His performances of the song on the television shows of Ed Sullivan and Milton Berle made him a bit of a scandal, he earned the nickname “Elvis the Pelvis”, but also made him really famous. “Hound Dog” would become their best-selling single in the United States. “Are You Lonesome” “Tomada noche?”. 1960 Elvis recorded “Are You Lonesome Tonight?” in 1960, shortly after returning from two years in the army. Elvis in the 60s is a complicated figure, starred in a myriad of movies built around his popularity, and recorded a myriad of songs for those movies, but much of the material feels commercial when you listen to it.
